

Work on paper first. Do not look at feedback until you have written END SESSION.

Target ID: _____ Date: _____ Start: _____

1. Settle

Take at least five quiet minutes in this course. Stay relaxed but alert. Ground, breathe, use stillness or soft focus if it helps you. This is a training routine, not a universal remote-viewing rule.

2. Optional quick mark / ideogram

After writing the target ID, make one quick spontaneous mark here if you choose. Do not try to draw the target.

3. First impressions

What came first? A word, feeling, texture, motion, color, sound, line, body sense, or brief image.

4. Sensory impressions

Color / light: _____

Texture: _____

Temperature: _____

Sound: _____

Smell / taste: _____

Atmosphere / body sense: _____

5. Shapes, lines, movement, and spatial relationships

Write only what comes to you. Do not choose from a list.

6. AOL - what my mind thinks the target is

If your mind names or explains the target, write the guess here, then return to raw description.

7. Raw summary

Summarize the strongest raw information without forcing it into a story.

End time: _____

Write: END SESSION

Do not change this page after feedback.

Sketch before reveal. Feedback notes belong only in the bottom section after the target is shown.

Drawing Space #1

Quick lines and spatial relationships are enough. This is not an art test.

Drawing Space #2

Quick lines and spatial relationships are enough. This is not an art test.

AFTER REVEAL - FEEDBACK

Clearest correspondence:

Clear miss or misinterpretation:

Did an AOL pull me off course?

Overall correspondence:

Strong Some Little / None

Keep the original session honest. Do not stretch vague notes into a hit. The target is the real site; feedback images are only a way to compare your recorded data with that site.
